Foreword by Sergeant Len Lebenon, Division Headquarters, 82nd Airborne Division, 1942 - 45. - During World War II, tens of thousands of American GIs had their first introduction to the European Theatre of Operations in the small towns, green fields, rolling hills and forests of Northern Ireland. In the main, these troops had crossed the dangerous U-boat infested Atlantic Ocean directly from the United States. We, the 82nd Airborne Division were different. In order to add some combat experienced seasoning to the armies preparing for the coming assault on Hitler s Fortress Europe, High Command plucked our Division from the Mediterranean theatre and dispatched us to the British Isles. We collected and assembled our widely dispersed elements from Italy, Sicily and North Africa and gathered around the Algerian port of Oran, before setting sail for parts unknown . Just after Thanksgiving Day 1943 we sailed far out into the Atlantic Ocean on the United States Navy transport ship Frederick Funston before heading east and arriving...
