The plaintiff having given evidence of a particular conversation of the defendant, tho latter is not thereby entitled to put in evidence his savings at other times not referred to in such conversation. Assumpsit, upon a promissory note dated March 24, 1836, for $45.27 payable to the plaintiff or order on demand with interest, in saddles and harnesses at cash price. Plea, the general issue with a brief statement setting forth that the defendant in 1840 made a parol agreement with Reuben Hayes, then the holder of said note, that it should be paid at Wolf borough, and that the defendant had the articles there of a sufficient amount, and requested Hayes to come to that place and receive payment accordingly, which he refused to do. It appeared on the trial that some time prior to 1838, the note was assigned by the payee to a son of Reuben, one Charles Hayes, who died in December of that year insolvent; that Reuben Hayes was his administrator, heir, and principal creditor, and that this action was commenced by his direction and for the benefit of the estate. Barker v. Barker. The evidence offered by the plaintiff teuded to show, that at the time the note was made both of the parties resided at Farmington. The defendant offered evidence tending to prove the allegations contained...
