Excerpt from Iowa Geological Survey, Vol. 16: Annual Report, 1905, With Accompanying Papers Portland cement: - A year ago the Survey published its first preliminary report on Portland Cement Materials, written by Eckels and Bain. This report showed that without question Iowa has an abundance oi high grade material suitable for Portland cement. It was sent about the state generally, to the 1ndustria1 agents of the various railroads entering the state, and to the cement experts and engineers throughout the country. As a consequence two months had not elapsed before the Industrial agent of the Illinois Central railroad brought into the state parties who desired to locate a large cement mill in Iowa if suitable conditions could be found. Fort Dodge was first visited and careful tests were made of the lime stones and shales to determine their quality and quantity. At this point material of admirable quality was found, but the quantity that could be readily obtained did not meet the requirements of the large mill that was proposed. The con ditions at Mason City were later examined and all of the requirements were met by the limestones and shales that are abundant, not only at that point but at a great number of localities in Cerro Gordo county. When the Geological work on this county was completed by Professor Calvin in 1897, atten tion was called to the abundance of cement materials; the ease with which they could be secured; and their probable chemical fitness. At that time the dry process for making cement had not come to the front and the development of the situation has waited till this time. During the past summer Professor Beyer, who is preparing a...
