Classical Conditioning (Paperback)

By Steven G Carley MS

Createspace, United States, 2015. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . When viewing behavior as instinctual this is to say complex behavior patterns have a genetic determinant. Activities the result of instinctive behavior include migration, hibernation, and mating behavior. This instinctive explanation of behavior is also termed species specific behavior. This type of behavior refers to not only complex behavior but also unlearned and unmodified behavior patterns of a certain species under certain circumstances. Instinctual behavior though thorough only explains one half of the nature versus nurture dichotomy the never ending struggle between associationism (empiricism) and rationalism. In existence are many forms of experiential or behavioral learning such as Thorndike s instrumental conditioning, Skinner s operant conditioning, and Pavlov s classical conditioning. In instrumental conditioning reinforcement occurs when an organism reacts in a certain manner. In classical conditioning an unconditioned stimulus is presented with a conditioned stimulus to create a conditioned response. Within operant conditioning the individual receives reinforcement or punishment in response to behavior. These conditioning techniques aim to demonstrate the effect of experience and learning on behavior. The behaviorist principles dominated psychology during the first half of the twentieth century. Not...
