Rep., 127 (1907). The subsidiary companies of the C. O. Ry. system in Kentucky have been consolidated into a Kentucky corporation, which is the property of the Virginia corporation. The court said: Every dollar s worth of tangible property owned by it has been taxed as the tangible property of the Virginia corporation, and every dollar s worth of intangible property owned by it has been taxed to the Virginia corporation, and constitutes a part of the intangible property of the Virginia corporation. To assess the Virginia corporation upon its intangible property, and then to assess the Kentucky corporation upon its intangible property, which was necessarily included in the first assessment, would be simply to tax the same property twice. Commonwealth 12. C. O. Ry. Co. in Ky., 131 Ky., 661 (1909). It is...
