Excerpt from An Essay on the Inability of Sinners: From the Evangelical Guardian and Review, for February and March, 1818, Printed at New-York So plain and repeated is the decision of the divine oracles against the ability of man to do the will of God. This decision will appear still plainer and more conclusive, if it can be shown from the representation given in the records of inspiration of the change produced by divine grace in a sinner, that a new principle, or power of action is communicated. How is it described? It is new life You hath he quickened who were dead in trespasses and It is a new birth: Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of It is a new creation.
