Brand New Book  Print on Demand .The HUD-sponsored National Evaluation of the Supportive Housing Demonstration Program reviews the results of what PDR Assistant Secretary Michael A. Stegman has called perhaps the best designed of the many HUD-administered McKinney homeless assistance programs. The Supportive Housing Demonstration Program (SHDP) was composed of two separate initiatives -- the Transitional Housing program that offered housing and services to help families move toward stability, while the Permanent Housing program provided long-term housing for disabled individuals. In 1992 Congress transformed SHDP into a permanent program that provided additional flexibility. In 1992 Transitional Housing projects were serving over 10,000 households, of whom almost half were one- or two-parent families with children. Half came from shelters or the streets; others were living independently or with relatives, or had been in hospitals or treatment facilities. Although the range and mix of supportive services offered through Transitional Housing programs varied, money management and housing location services were almost universal -- household management, prevocational training, and vocational counseling were also common features. Overall, Transitional Housing projects helped participants make significant progress toward independent living. Seventy...
