Xulon Press. Paperback. Condition: New. 96 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 0.2in. This book examines human interactions—specifically those that pertain to race—in a variety of different contexts. Exploring modern history, biblical history, and the study of social sciences, the author blends the past with the present in this commentary on the state of race relations in the world today. The author's examination of the subject matter embraces both the scientific and humanistic elements, blending the psychological with the societal, historical, and cultural aspects. The author uses stories and statistics to account for both the studied, archived, statistical norm of human interactions, as well as the unpredictable element of unexpected human behavior. The author includes both scientific and Bible research to support the points that he presents in the manuscript. This item ships from multiple locations. Your book may arrive from Roseburg, OR, La Vergne, TN. Paperback.
