Furthermore, on much of the material transferred, such as blood, bones, tankage, glue stock, etc., there is no ascertainable outside market, and the packers must perform place quite arbitrary valuations on this material having no probable relation to either cost or market. Again certain products are in the green stage when transferred, and an outside market only obtains for the finished stage, with the result that arbitrary deductions must be made from the finished market, estimated to establish a nonexistent green market. The certification of internal transfer prices presents, accordingly, an almost interminable problem to any outside reviewing body. Thus transfer prices not being based on cost, provide a technique whereby profits may be arbitrarily thrown from one department into another in much the same fashion as arbitrary billing prices (based on market quotations) for products shipped from plants to branch houses throw the profit from the former to the latter, or vice versa. It is a notable fact, that according to the present method of departmental accounting, the packers are in the habit of showing low profits or even positive losses in the carcass-meat departments, while at the same time exhibiting large profits in the by-products or specialty departments, the chief reason for this somewhat extraordinary state of affairs being found in the valuations placed upon transfers. Armour Co., for instance, in the profitable year of 1917 showed a loss in its dressed-beef department of $3,500,000, while the oleo...
