Jan. 13th. We made the land this evening, but from its being so low, and the coast rising only a few feet above the level of the water, we were unable to distinguish it at any great distance. Before night-fall we obtained a very indistinct view of Alexandria, resembling the broken outline of an old fortress, and the Arabs Tower that of a low hummock. The harbour not being safe to enter at night, we lay off and on till morning, when we found ourselves abreast of the tower, a plain, round, dark-looking building, not unlike an armless windmill, or those towers along the Spanish shore, as VOL. I. R 242 A TURKISH PILOT. you enter the Straits of Gibraltar. This is the only object for miles along the...
