Excerpt: . . . - 7 sonal Business and Communication, and Recreation Figure 1-2. -Structure of the Analysis and Leisure has increased ( see figure 1-1 ). The amenity ultimately enjoyed by each individual or household is achieved through a complex series of steps, each of which adds value of some kind. The value may be contributed by investments of household time, or maybe added by a business that contributes to a purchased product or service. The final value of a purchased frozen pizza, for example, includes value contributed by farmers, packers, truckers, wholesalers, grocery stores, and the collection of legal, financial, insurance, and other firms that facilitate transactions needed by the complex network of activities. The methods this analysis uses to keep track of the flow of value in economy are summarized in figure 1-2, which illustrates four basic steps in the network connecting people as consumers to people as employees and investors: 1. These recipes describe Consumption Recipes. the way households achieve each amenity by combining time invested by household members, purchased goods, purchased services, and goods and services purchased by the government. ( The mix of private and public spending in 1985 is summarized in figure 1-3. ) A recipe Figure 1-1. -How America Spent Its Money ( percent of all personal and government spending in current dollars ) Food Housing lTransportationh Hea Food Clothng and Pers.
