John xviii. 1-12. Though there is now, through God s mercy, an unexpected time of quiet in these lands, we know that wars and rumours of wars will again prevail, and it is well to keep in remembrance the troublous times and sad scenes of misery and bloodshed in which our fellow-saints of other days have lived. Patriarchs, prophets and apostles could all tell us of terrible events which they themselves witnessed, and they would wonder, perhaps, at the outwardly smooth and easy lives that we have lived. Of course such troubles are not distinctively the afflictions of Christ for His body s sake the Church; nor are they the afflictions of the gospel ; they are simply the evils and sorrows of a sinful world, which Christians may have to witness and more or less to share in. But even these sore calamities of war few of us have ever seen. Yet it is well to be prepared, for to the wise, to be forewarned is to be forearmed; and God s word by His Spirit clothes us with a panoply of Christian meekness and submission and patience in readiness for such a day. Our Master Himself was painfully acquainted with man s use of the sword. Herod s massacre of the infants of Bethlehem occurred in His early years, and armed soldiers nailed Him to the cross. But concerning all such things that may have come before...
